Planes join fighting in Managua

MANAGUA, Nicaragua. — President Anastasio Somoza's National Guard pounded Sandinista guerrillas with planes and armoured cars in Managua yesterday, and fighting also raged in the northern cities of Esteli, Matagalpa and Leon.

A U.S. Air Force transport plane evacuated 61 Americans, mostly women and children, from the battletorn capital and flew them to the Panama Canal Zone.

The C-130, which had arrived earlier from the Canal Zone, picked up its passengers — many of them families of U.S. Embassy staff members — at an airstrip near here. U.S. officials asked that its location be kept secret for the security of luture evacuation operations.

Some 15,000 people streamed out of Managua seeking refuge from the heaviest fighting yet in the capital between the rebels and the National

For the first time, the air force of President Somoza strafed and rocketed guerrilla-held districts in the capital.

Large sections of Managua were without water and electricity. Few residents ventured from their homes; those who did carried white flags. Most of the fighting took place in slum neighbourhoods where sympathy for the guerrillas is strongest.

Large columns of black smoke rose from opposite ends of the city; major roads were strewn with debris left from pitched battles between the guerrillas and Somoza's troops.

Miguel Shibel, general director of the Red Cross in the capital, said that 12,000 persons were quartered at 10 centres in Managua.

"There's a large number of dead and wounded in the poor neighbourhoods, but there's no accurate information on how many."

Another Red Cross official said that "some people we've seen have not eaten for several days."

Meanwhile, Somoza told a newsconference at his heavily fortified downtown headquarters that the estimated 1,300 dead in the latest round of fighting included 800 men of the National Guard, his combined army and police force. (AP, UPI)

Knesset c'tee moves slowly on Flatto issue

By ASHER WALLFISH Post Knesset Reporter

Prospects of the Knesset House Committee deciding quickly on Attorney-General Yitzhak Zamir's request to lift MK Samuel Flatto-Sharon's immunity so he can stand trial on election bribery charges looked dim when the first substantive session on the request was held yesterday.

Veteran committee men said in the lobbles that Flatto had more than an even chance of getting off without the committee recommending approval for Zamir's request. If the committee takes no decision, the issue is buried and it cannot come before the plenum, and Flatto will not be tried.

A majority of the committee members held that their function was to examine Zamir's grounds for requesting that immunity be lifted, and go into the substance of the charges, "like a grand jury in the U.S." as Moshe Amar (Alignment-Mapam) put it.

A minority, including committee chairman Yitzhak Berman, was against entering the substance of the charges, but merely in favour of establishing that the attorneygeneral's request was not politically motivated.

Zamir, who gave the members the charge-sheet, explained that the probe took a long time because of the decision to do a thorough job, and not for any other reason. Great care was taken, he said, not only because an MK was involved, but because the cutcome tould lay down patterns of behaviour in coming election cam-

John Wayne loses to 'Big C'

LOS ANGELES (Reuter). - John Wayne, a Hollywood legend who seldom lost a fight in more than 200 films, died Monday night after a 15year battle with the "Big. C," his bravado name for cancer.

Hollywood knew the 72-year-old loping, slow-speaking hero of westerns and war films was dying but it was still shaken by the news of his death.

Entertainer Bob Hope, a close friend, summed up the feelings of the stars when he said Wayne's death "was a great loss. But he made a lot of important pictures that will live on and on." Wayne entered the hospital for the last time five weeks ago and had an intestinal blockage removed. But doctors found cancer cells in his intestines and he never returned to his luxurious home overlooking the Pacific just south of Los Angeles.

Wayne was separated from his Peruvian-born third wife, Pilar, but his seven children were at his bedside when he died. They took a room next to his $350-a-day hospital suite so a son or daughter could constantly be at his side.

Wayne had been in a coma for 24 hours before he died. But the fact that he was dying was kept secret. "Wayne refused medication at times to ease his pain so that he could stay awake and talk to his family," said a spokesman at the University of California in Los Angeles hospital.

Israel fighter decision soon IAI chief

By HIRSH GOODMAN Jerusalem Post Correspondent

PARIS. — Israel Aircraft Industries director Gabriel Gidor revealed yesterday that a decision concerning Israel's future warplane will be made within the next two months. Speaking to correspondents at the Paris Air Show, being held at the Le Bourget airport near here, Gidor said that he had already held intensive talks with the heads of U.S. defence industries over the past few days to define and isolate any future cooperation if the Israeli government should decide not to build a third generation Israeli fighter, but to coproduce an American fighter instead. The most likely candidate for such co-production would be the McDonnell Douglas F-18.

Gidor also revealed that, during the air show, two governments and four major manufacturers approached him with requests for demonstrations and details on the Scout remotely piloted recon-naissance drone the IAI is showing at Paris for the first time.

Relating to the expected decision on the future-warplane - which all pointers indicate will not be manufactured exclusively in Israel as the IAI had hoped - Gidor said that the F-16 example, where virtually no co-production was offered Israel, would not be repeated.

He refused to say what firms Israel was discussing co-production with, or what this entailed, other than to say that all aspects of the problem had been discussed, including avionics, electronics and structural

Autonomy team back: talks stall

By ANAN SAFADI Jerusalem Post Reporter

ALEXANDRIA. - The Israel team to the autonomy negotiations, headed by Interior Minister Yosef Burg, returned home from here yesterday after making little progress in two days of talks that began in a blaze of public acrimony. Together with Burg were Foreign Minister Moshe Dayan, Defence Minister Ezer Weizman, Justice Minister Shmuel Tamir, Minister without Portfolio Moshe Nissim and Agriculture Minister Ariel Sharon.

After failing to agree on either procedures or an agenda, the Alexandria conference between Israel, Egypt and the U.S. ended with a decision that one member from each side will meet within a week in Herzliya "to begin work on a draft list of topics" for the negotiations.

The procedural issues which slowed down the first stage of the autonomy talks yesterday appeared unlikely to be resolved before next month's summit here, between President Anwar Sadat and Premier Menahem Begin.

It was not clear whether the three representatives - who will not be ministers — were being com-missioned to draw up the negotiating agenda. Israel and Egypt have been at loggerheads for some time on this Egyptian Minister of State for Foreign Affairs Butros Ghali told reporters here that the three men were expected to outline "what we agreed on and what we disagreed on, with the aim of deciding on priorities.'

Ghali said that if this subcommittee failed to agree on joint action, its task will be taken up at the next full ministerial committee meeting, scheduled for Herzliya on June 25.

The formation of the subcommittee was one of five minor moves the Alexandria conference agreed on. The others were: the plenary meetings, attended by all three parties, will be closed;

the host side for each session will be responsible for providing the necessary arrangements and services for the meetings;

• the sessions will be held as a rule every other week, alternating between Egypt and Israel;

 the three sides also agreed that public statements about the work done in meetings be coordinated between them all. Ministers Ghali for Egypt and Tamir for Israel emerged from yesterday's concluding session to tell reporters that there was still "a very wide gap" between the two countries, but they said they believed it could be narrowed. Apart from procedural wrangling, Egypt and Israel are known to be locked in fundamental differences on the meaning of autonomy, on the status of East Jerusalem and on the question of Israeli settlements in the West Bank and the Gaza Strip. The negotiations have been further complicated by another two issues: the status of the U.S. representatives, and the issue of chairmanship. Israel's position is that the U.S. is entitled to "participate fully" in the rotiations, in accordance with the letter on autonomy annexed to the peace treaty. But the Egyptians regard the role of the Americans as far more integral to the negotiations, maintaining that the U.S. is a "full partner" in the design of the proected autonomy for the West Bank and Gaza, and is thus entitled to share in the chairmanship of the

U.S. role in autonomy talks worrying Dayan Jerusalem Post Reporter

Jerusalem officials last night declined to confirm or deny an Israel TV report stating that Foreign Minister Moshe Dayan cautioned the U.S. that Israel may "reconsider its attitude to the Camp David accords" unless Washington clarified its status in the current autonomy negotiations. The report said that Dayan yester-day stated the Israeli position to the U.S. representative to the autonomy negotiations, James Leonard, while both were in Alexandria. The issue is whether the U.S. should play an active or passive role in the talks between Israel and Egypt. "Dayan told Leonard that unless Israel receives a satisfactory answer on the status of the U.S. in the talks, he would recommend that Israel reconsider its attitude to the Camp David accords," the report noted. Earlier in the day, Dayan was reported to have been concerned over the fact that the U.S. representatives had demonstrated interest in Alexandria in serving as alternate chairman in the autonomy negotiations.

But Leonard told newsmen in Alexandria that "the American delegation does not have to worry about chairing meetings because the problem has been dealt with (between Israel and Egypt) very

400 new volumes for Hebrew Book Week Jerusalem Post Reporter

TEL AVIV. - Continual musical and dramatic entertainment will accompany the release of 400 new books at the traditional Hebrew Book Week huginning today in six central book fairs throughout the country. The largest of the fairs will be held in Tel Aviv's Kikar Malchel Yisrael. Book Week in Tel Avlv will be combined with the city's annual arts fair, which stretches from the municipal square to the end of Sderot Hen.

The book stall route in Kikar Maichel Yisrael will lead the visiting public along a kilometre and a half of publications, representing all Israel's publishing establishments in addition to individual writers and racts. Discounts of up to 35 per cent will be offered. The fair also will display some 500 new editions of old books for a total of 22,000 writers and 92 publishers. New issues of several literary periodicals, such as "Siman Kria," "Proza" and "Iton 77," will also be coming out tomorrow.

This year marks the Hebrew Book Week's 20th anniversary and the Publishers Union's 40th anniversary. Some 3,760 books were published this year for 11.1m. total volumes.

Colombioni's Clown Troup will perform in Kikar Malchel Yisrael ionight and tomorrow evening. A performance of pantomime and improvization will be held on Saturday night. Desert love is a hardy plant NAHALAL (Itim).- A Beduin beguty who had cast her spell on the young men of her tribe and its Emek neighbours for 17 years was married on Monday night at the age of 31, thanks to the intervention of Giora Zeid, son of the pioneer of the Shomer movement, Alexander Zeid. The bridegroom was a released convict.

The girl became eligible for marriage when she was 14, and since she had no male cousins, she was not spoken for. Her father turned down repeated offers for her hand, because he felt none of the prospective grooms was worthy of his daughter.

A few weeks ago one of her early suitors was released from prisonafter serving a seven-year sentence for robbery. Discovering that the woman was still single, he renewed his suit, but came up against his prospective father-in-law, who was put off by the idea of a son-in-law

Nazi expert to Germany as vote on statute nears

By YA'ACOV FRIEDLER Jerusalem Post Reperter

HAIFA. — Tuvia Friedman, director of the Documentation Centre of Nazi Crimes, is scheduled to go to Bonn on Sunday to promote public support for the revocation of Germany's statute of limitations on Nazi criminals. The Bundestag is scheduled to hold its final reading and vote on the issue on June 20 and 21. The statute of limitations is due to go into force at the end of this year, unless it is suspended by the Bundestag.

Friedman estimates that there are still several thousand former Nazis alive in Germany. The statute would enable them to come out this the for their crimes.

Friedman said that he will meet with German Justice Minister Hans Jochem Vogel, a long-standing suptaking with him a list of 250 senior SS officers who worked on the staff of Adolf Eichman in the occupied countries of Europe to carry out the "final solution." Half of them have not yet been apprehended, according to Political observers in Bonn have estimated that there is now a small majority in the Bundestag favouring the revocation of the statute of limitations for Nazi criminals. Until a few months ago the majority had tended to permit the statute to go into force in the expectation that this would "put an end" to the darkest chapter of modern German history.

The change of attitude is seen by observers as due in some measure to the persistent campaign Friedman has waged against the statute since the summer of 1977. He has appealed to world leaders, including Soviet President Leonid Brezhnev, U.S. President Jimmy Carter and the pope, as well as to leading U.S. senators, to exert their influence with Bonn on the issue. The Knesset unanimously resolved to appeal to Germany to suspend the statute.

war crime charges. Mengele, now 68, was 88hauptsturmfuehrer (captain) at Auschwitz during World War II, and as camp doctor is accused of being responsible for the deaths of 200,000 children and the same number of

Treasury to publish tax evaders'names

By SHLOMO MAOZ Post Economic Reporter

As part of the state-wide crackdown on income tax dodgers, the state revenue administrator is going to publish annually a list of convicted tax evaders.

However, the list will not include the amount of money the evaders owed the authority, even though according to a little-known rule in the tax authority's mandate, it has the authority to do so. Meanwhile, a Tiberias man was the names of tax dodgers came after a study showed the evaders may start paying full taxes for fear their names will appear in public. But it was decided not to publish the amounts because more people might avoid paying any taxes if their income becomes public knowledge.

PROFILE OF AN OUTSTANDING EXPORTER

By Rolly King-Kohansky

Each Year several Israell industrialists are singled to the recognition in bolstering the country's overseas market by being awarded the title "Outstanding Exporter". The criteria for this distinction are new market development, export growth, high standards of quality and service. Chaim Fefer, President Tromasbest, the company which produces pre-fabricated buildings, is being honored this year for his role in promoting Israel's export trade.

Seated in his office, amidst piles of papers and books, Mr. Fefer belies the popular image of a high-powered businessman; his quiet, unassuming manner is rather that of an university teacher or writer. In fact, he is a graduate in civil engineering with a B.Sc. degree from the prestigious Technion in Haifa, and an M.Sc. degree from Pennsylvania University in

Chaim Fefer, President of Tromasbest

Mr Fefer graciously offered me some of his valuable time and, overcoming his natural reticence, told me something about Fromasbest and the company's accomplishments.

Tromasbest was established back in 1958 by Mr. Fefer and the late Perez Chop. They began in Naharya on a modest scale, manufacturing small pre-fab storage rooms. It was a difficult time in Israel's history, with a sudden influx of immigrants from both European and Asian countries, and there was a serious housing shortage in the country. Tromasbest came up with an idea for solving this problem with the help of pre-fabricated homes. However, putting the idea into practice was not easy. Pre-fab had not enjoyed a good reputation until then, due to the poor appearance of the early "asbeston" huts, as they were called, which had been hurrledly put up by others to cope with the rapid inflow of people.

"We managed to overcome this poor image by designing new, bright, attractive houses all over the country", said Mr. Fefer, "In fact, they were so well accepted that most of the original owners still live in them, and even refer their friends to us, to this day."

When asked about the advantages of pre-fab construction versusconventional buildings, Mr. Fefer was quick to reply: "Oh, there are many: the buildings are flexible, can be designed to individual specifications. are insulated against heat, cold and noise, are just about maintenancefree, and are much less expensive than conventional houses.

Obviously proud of the company's achievement in meeting the challenge, Mr Fefer warmed up to the

"We began by exporting a model house to an American company which intended to use it for American army personnel in the Philipines. This offered us an opportunity to design and build top-quality products which and move in.' Following this success, the plant was moved to Acco, in 1963. This development area has a mixed population of Jews and Arabs, and the company is proud of their good worker-employer relations. A visit to the plant with its efficient, quiet atmosphere proves this point.

in 1966 Tromasbest virtually took over the pre-fab market. This encouraged the company's Board of Directors to invest more money so as to introduce an automatic assembly line. Parallel to this development. Tromasbest designed several types of buildings for purposes other than

Following the Six Day Way in 1967, an exciting proposal came to Tromasbest from the Ministry of Defense. They wanted the company to design buildings for the army in Sinai: canteens, classrooms, offices warehouses, etc. It had to be done quickly. The project turned out to be highly successful, and Tromasbest buildings are now used by the army all over the country.

The international market

By 1971 Tromasbest again increased production, and decided to look into the international market. The company received the status of an approved enterprise, which added impetus to explore the international market for a product that had never before been exported from Israel.

Chaim Fefer looks towards the future with enthusiasm for his newest project: portable houses which can be assembled, dis-assembled and reassembled. The components can be transported from one site to another, without resorting to containers, in flat boxes which need only be stacked. This represents enormous savings in shipping and crating costs. The houses are already in production, with several countries evidencing interest.

"Our greatest accomplishment in 1979 will be to help solve the housing

"In 1976 we competed in a tender for creating an entire town in Iran. We won it by meeting international standards of quality, finish, design, and ability to keep schedules - at competitive prices. We shipped two complete towns to the Caspian Sea and the Persian Gulf: houses, schools, offices, community centres — the works!."

"One of the main problems we had to overcome on this particular order concerned packaging the different elements. We accomplished this by devising a new kind of container which prevents breakage. Without this we would not have been able to export

"We intend to meet the constant demand for accomodations, especially for newly marrieds, with our new two-storey, pre-fab houses now in production. This model will answer the five most important requirements: It is attractive, longlasting, virtually maintenance-free, flexible, and inexpensive. We think we will meet this challenge successfully."

Khomeini wants Soviet proof Moscow not smuggling arms

TEHERAN, Iran (AP).— Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini challenged the Soviet ambassador yesterday to prove that Soviet arms are not being smuggled across the border into Iran. Khomeini also warned him repeatedly that Russian behaviour "must be such as to destroy all mis-understandings" about Soviet activities in this country.

In a lengthy and sometimes sharp conversation, reported by the Ira-nian state radio, Khomeini also condemned Soviet support for the leftist government of neighbouring Afghanistan, which is battling Moslem guerrillas in its provinces. When Ambassador Vladimir Vinogradov protested that the Afghanistan regime had helped "the poor and needy," Khomeini retorted that "it is clear that you don't know what's going on there.' When Vinogradov asked about any proof in Iranian hands of Soviet gunrunning, Khomeini replied in turn that "you must prove that Russian-made guns do not enter Iran from your country."

Dalai Lama off on visit to Mongolia

NEW DELHI (Reuter) .- The Dalai Lama, Tibetan temporal and spiritual leader, left New Delhi yesterday for a week-long visit to Mongolia.

The religious leader will make a four-hour stopover in Moscow before leaving to attend an Asian Buddhist conference in Ullan Battr.

In a recent interview with "Newsweek" magazine, he said that although Tibet remained "a vast prison" he hoped his country could regain independence through negotiations with Peking.

The Dalai Lama, who fled from Tibet 20 years ago, now lives in exile in northwest India.

Jordan to buy Mirage F-1 fighters, Hussein reveals

PARIS (Reuter). — King Hussein of Jordan yesterday watched a stun-ning demonstration flight of France's latest combat aircraft, the delta-winged Mirage 2000 and Mirage 4000, and said afterwards that the Jordan air force would soon buy Mirage planes.

"To begin with, we hope very soon to buy the Mirage F-1 (a single-seat fighter aircraft now in service with the French air force and Arab air forces)," he said. "And hopefully, later on as the Mirage 2000 and Mirage 4000 go into production, we will remain within the Mirage family.

Hussein, who on Monday hadluncheon talks with President Valery Giscard d'Estaing, added: "We hope this is the beginning of a very close association not only with the family of Mirage aircraft, but with our friends in France." The Jordanian air force has an ex-

Cuban hijacks plane back to Hayana

MIAMI (AP). — A stocky, bearded man who hijacked a U.S. airliner to Havana on Monday night was tentatively identified yesterday as the Cuban pilot who flew an armed Mig jet fighter to the U.S. in 1969 without being spotted by defence radar until just before he landed in Florida. It was the first hijacking of a U.S. plane to Cuba in 4½ years.

The hijacker told the crew of the Delta Airlines New York-to-Fort Lauderdale flight that he was carrying an explosive in a bag, forcing them to fly him and 194 passengers to Havana, an FBI special agent said. Cuban authorities who led him away in handcuffs after the plane landed did not say whether an explosive was found The plane, Flight 1061, was then allowed to leave and landed at Miami International Airport at 2:10 a.m. with all passengers and 12 crew members unbarmed.

A State Department spokesman said the hijacker had been identified as Eduardo Guerra Jiminez, the name of the Cuban pilot who defected in 1969. However, officials said they could not confirm that the hijacker was the Guerra who defected.

Guerra, 37, shocked officials in October 1969 when he landed a Mig-17 at Homestead air force base in a plane that carried 40 rounds of ammunition and two cannons armed with 160 rounds. He was not picked up on U.S. radar until just before his Guerra was then a lieutenant in the Cuban air force. He said he left his family and homeland because he wanted to be away from Fidel Castro's regime. Two years later he was arrested in New York on drug charges, but the charges were diamissed. He told police that he had been unable to find a job in the U.S.

Dutch queen opens Anne Frank room

AMSTERDAM, (Reuter).— Queen Juliana of the Netherlands yesterday opened a modernized exhibition room in the house where Anne Frank and her family hid from the Gestapo during World War II.

The ceremony was held on the 50th anniversary of the birth of the Jewish girl whose diaries about Nazi persecution became known throughout the world.

Her 90-year-old father, Otto Frank, the only survivor, attended the ceremony.

Included in the new display was a page of Anne's diary telling the story of how eight Jews, including the

Frank family, hid in a secret annex of the house for 25 months until they were betrayed and deported to extermination camps in August 1944. Anne died in Bergen-Belsen in March 1945 but her diary has been translated into more than 50 languages and sold 14 million copies. Almost all the $40,000 needed for the reconstruction of the room were donated by towns and cities in West Germany.

Anne Frank was born in Frankfurt on June 12, 1929. The family fled from Germany in 1933 when Hitler came to power but were trapped again following the German invasion of the Netherlands in 1940.

FOCUS

WASHINGTON. — The National Conference on Soviet Jewry opened its annual policy meeting here on Sunday with a growing split evident in the American Jewish leadership regarding the interpretation of the Jackson-Vanik "freedom of emigration" amendment.

American Jewish activists are lining up either behind Senator Henry Jackson (D-Wash.) or Representative Charles Vanik (D-Ohio), the two authors of the 1974 legislation linking the extension of mostfavoured-nation trade status and other trade benefits for the Soviet Union to a liberalization in Soviet emigration.

In recent weeks, Jackson and Vanik have made it clear that they disagree on the key clause in the amendment defining the terms under which the U.S. can grant the Soviets those benefits. As passed by Congress in 1974, the law stipulates that the president can provide the trade benefits by issuing a one-year waiver for a communist country only after "he has received assurances that the emigration practice of that country will henceforth lead substantially to the achievement of the objective of this section (freedom of emigration)."

Jackson is seeking firm, preferably written assurances from the Soviet Union, while Vanik fears that embarrassing Moscow by pressing for such specific assurances might worsen the plight of Soviet Jewry. He is willing to allow those "assurances" to take the form of observed performance.

THE CARTER Administration is clearly supporting Vanik. U.S. officials would like to extend the trade benefits in the coming weeks simultaneously to the Soviet Union and to China. The split between the Jackson and Vanik camps was apparent as the three-day convention of the National Conference on Soviet Jewry, the major coordinating body for organizations working on behalf of Soviet Jewry, opened in Washington. On Sunday evening, Jackson received the organization's 1979-"Solidarity Award" for his work on behalf of Soviet Jewry.

Senator Edward Kennedy (D-Mass.) was to receive an award last night and Vanik was also scheduled to address the group but was not slated to receive a specific award.

All sides in the controversy - the administration, Jackson, Vanik and the American Jewish community are united in insisting that the Jackson-Venik amendment should not be revised at the present time. They believe that extending the trade benefits should be done within the limits of the waiver provision of the existing law.

Theodore Mann, chairman of the Conference of Presidents of Major American Jewish Organizations, is already on record as predicting that some sort of compromise will be Most political observers agree with Mann's assessment, although the differences between Jackson and Vanik are by no means insignificant. The White House is aware of the differences and their impact on the American Jewish leadership.

In private conversations, sources close to Jackson bitterly accuse Vanik and his supporters of "abandoning" the original intent of the amendment. They insist that the law was clear in calling for "assurances" of positive Soviet behaviour — not only in terms of numbers of emigrants, but also in the treatment of visa applicants. Vanik denies the accusations.

The outgoing chairman of the National Conference on Soviet Jewry, Eugene Gold, said late last month that recent Soviet behaviour toward Jews was "very encouraging." He said some "very real progress has been made" in the rise of Jewish emigration rates and in the release of some prisoners. At the current rate, about 50,000 Soviet Jews are expected to leave Russia this year. Some 29,000 left last vear.

SECRETARY OF STATE Cyrus Vance and Secretary of the Treasury Michael Blumenthal have been meeting with Soviet Ambassador Anatoly Dobrynin, seeking to determine how far the Sovieta will go in providing "assurances." The discussions are expected to continue during President Carter's summit with Soviet President Leonid Brezhnev in Vienna beginning later this week. The Soviets have been pressing for a "waiver" period of more than one

Moscow has pointed to its recently concluded 25-year trade agreement with France and 15-year pact with West Germany. At a minimum, Soviet officials have informed Washington, a five-year agreement with the U.S. is necessary.

But given the political climate in the U.S. Congress, the one-year waiver called for in the Jackson-Vanik amendment is the only feasible option for the administration. Experts here believe that the Soviets will eventually come to understand that the trade benefits will have to be extended for either a one-year period — or not at all.

John Wayne

JOHN WAYNE disliked being labelled "a legend in his own time" ("legends are people who aren't around," he would grow!); but legend he was by the time of his death, and in his 250-odd films "the created an entity known as "John Wayne's America." If the red man was distinctly unsafe there, and he black man didn't exist, to millions of Wayne fans around the world, it was the basic stuff of the Critics might mook Wayne's ac-ting, liberals shake dismayed heads ever his super-patriotism; moviegoers passed judgement on his rugged action films by continually buying tickets. For more than 20 years, the actor remained on the list of Top Ten box-office champions, an unsurpassed record. No one made more money for his masters in Hollywood than "Duke."

Wayne, born Marion Michael Morrison in Iowa, 1907, was brought to California as a child by his parents. After a brief spell in the limelight as a college football star, he drifted into movies via a job as prop boy at Fox Studies. His first major role was in "The Big Trail" By WILLIAM SCOBIE when theatre-owners couldn't porary epics as "The Wild Bunch." JOHN FORD'S classic Western "Stagecoach" (1939) made Wayne into an international star and marked the beginning of his importance to American mythology. In different uniforms, on a variety of fronts, he led the U.S. to victory in a series of In the 1930s he broke the convention whereby the bad guy always struck the first blow. He became, as World War II films, of which the most memorable, "Sands of Iwo Jima," earned him an Academy Award nomination. A fervent anti-Communist, Wayne helped to turn the movies into an ideological battleground during the red-hunting, blacklisting 'forties and 'fifties. He was an energetic member of the "Motion Picture Alliance for the Preservation of American Ideals" who, like many in the McCarthy years, found reds under some improbable beds.

Believing the film "High Noon" to be Communist-inspired — after all, its sheriff-hero had law 'n' order doubts and eventually threw his badge in the dust, while its scriptwriter, Carl Foreman, had fled McCarthyite persecution to England Wayne riposted with a Western of his own, "Rio Bravo." In this, the sheriff is restored to pristine virtue.

Wayne's most controversial film was his hawk's-eye-view of the Viet-nam war, "The Green Berets," directed by and starring himself. He professed to be undisturbed by the critical obloquy heaped on this ringing defence of America's S.E.

Asian intervention. "Thanks to the overkill, an $8m. picture made a profit in three months," he said at the time. "Don't critics know that 'A John Wayne movie got bad reviews' is a redundant sentence?"

Liberal "dovea" accused Wayne and the Pentagon of conspiring to produce to present a heroic view of a war repudiated by the majority of Americans; but the actor staunchly defended his film as "made strictly for entertainment, and to show what our lads were going through."

Challenged by the youthful editors of the Harvard Lampoon to "dare to set foot in the Harvard wilderness" and premiere his latest film on campus, he cheerfully accepted. In blithe self-parody, he drove down Cambridge's historic Brattle Street in an armoured personnel carrier, bran-dishing an M-15 rifle, while students cheered and snowballed him. Later, in a hall packed to capacity with 1,-800 students, he won over a largely hostile audience with amiable, wisecracking responses to taunting

After a battle with cancer in the 1960a which cost him his left lung and part of his right, Wayne's doctors gave him only five years to live. But the 6ft. 4in. "Duke" with his tremendous zest for life, wasn't the sort of man to retire to a deckchair on the terrace of his $250,000 California beachfront home. "That would kill me quicker than cancer." he said. and went on to make 18 more films. For "True Grit" (1970) - and perhaps also in tribute to his 30-odd years on the range — he won his only

Oscar, as Best Actor. Open-heart surgery (a faulty valve was replaced with one from a healthy pig) in 1978, followed by a second bout with cancer, ended his screen career.

Yet barely three months after a 10hour operation in which his stomach was removed, the resilient Wayne appeared, gaunt, but in good voice, to present 1979's Academy Award for Best Picture to the director of an anti-Vietnam war film - whose name he studiously mispronounced. Cleaning up Kenya

By GORDON MACLEAN/Nairobi

POLITICS, in the doldrums since Jomo Kenyatta died last August, are back again in Kenya with a vengeance as the nation prepares for a general election which will show President Daniel arap Moi whether or not he has the full confidence of the people. All the signs are that he has the enthusiastic backing of the vast majority of Kenyans in his determined bid to wipe out the tribalism, corruption and privilege which became a reature of Kenyan life in the latter days of Jonio Kenyatta's regime. It was inevitable that Mot's spirited drive to turn Kenya into a developing country with a clean slate would make a few powerful enemies, esng those who enjoyed the previous perks and privileges. Neither the president nor his closest advisers believes in mincing words, so Kenyans know exactly where the problem lies and what grave risks Moi and his closest associates took before he came to power — especially from the op-noments who planned to eliminate him on the very day of Kenyatta's death last August. His chief political enemies, few but influential, are concentrated mainly in the thickly-populated district of Klambu, the Kikuyu heartland on the outskirts of the capital where Kenyatta commanded unswerving support — and in turn gave licence to close friends to engage in undertakings which brought them enormous fortunes.

THE ANTI-MOI faction also drew support from people in the other Kikuyu-inhabited districts of central Kenya, and although only a handful have become millionaires, their prestige and influence, as well as their wealth, have trickled down through relatives and neighbours until the other Kenyan peoples began to feel almost second-class citizens.

All the best opportunities, jobs and privileges went to the Kikuyu elite, especially those connected with what became to be known as the "royal family."

This was a subject not even whispered in public in the Kenyatta era, but with the advent of Mol and the fact that he has not been afraid to condemn tribalism and nepotism.

the media now openly condemns tribal privilege and no voice is heard opposing the changed situation.

Fearlessly supported by Attorney-General Charles Njonjo, who is himself a Kikuyu from Klambu, Moi recently took a hefty swipe at the very core of the old Kikuyu 'establishment'' when he sanctioned the arrest of leading members of the powerful and tribalistic GEMA society, and they appeared in court recently to face charges of failing to provide amual reports and details of the society's activities over the

It was another demonstration by the Moi government that no one in Kenya is above the law, save the president, and that the law "will not be bent." The action against the GEMA bosses followed shortly upon major shake-ups in the police, army and diplomatic service to remove persons whose loyalty Moi considered doubtful.

Only after the general elections, to be held later this year, will Moi make any changes in his cabinet. although it is an open secret that at least half of the present ministers are opposed to the president's

TEL AVIV. - Israel faces home squad Italy tonight in the opening game of the top finals group of the European Basketball Championships in Turin.

After a dramatic seven-second turn of fortune on Monday night. Israel today finds itself in an entirely new ball game, at a new venue and against a new class of opponents the world's best.

The odds will be against Israel before the start of every game, for the opposition will be Italy tonight (7:15 p.m.), Spain tomorrow (9:15 p.m.), Czechoslovakia on Saturday (9:15 p.m.) and the USSR on Sunday (9:15 p.m.)

It was an earthquake of a night in the other two groupings as well, with underdog Spain beating the USSR by 101-90 and Czechoslovakia defeating Italy 74-68. Spain, Czechoslovakia and Israel start the final playoffs with two points each following these Israel finished on top of its group, with Yugoslavia second, Poland third and France fourth. Czechoslovakia led Italy, Greece and Belgium and Spain won the third group from the USSR, Holland and LUCERNE. Switzerland (AP). Israeli grandmasters Yehuda Grinfeld and Shimon Kagan will join West Germany's Robert Huebner in the interzonal rounds of international chess competition. They took the first three places in the European Zone II tournament which ended yesterday.

The outcome was certain to pose problems for organizers of the inter-. sonal tournaments scheduled later this summer in Riga, the USSR, and Rio de Janeiro to select a challenger for world champion Anatoly Karpov of the Soviet Union.

Kagan told a reporter he expected it would be impossible for an Israeli to play in the Soviet Union and that he believed there would be an exchange of berths, with perhaps Huebner going to Riga instead of Rio as originally planned.

Final standings: 1. Huebner 6.0 points; 2. Grinfeld 5.0; 3. Kagan 4.0; Wedberg 3.5; 5. Sigurjonsson 3.0; 6. Helmers 2.5; 7. Olafason 2.5; 8.

Batting slump left Israel winless in cricket cup games

By JACK LEON Post Sports Reporter

TEL AVIV. - A series of poor performances by established batsmen was the main reason for Israel's failure to win a match in the 15nation Prudential World Cricket Cup qualifying competition, played off in the English Midlands during the past fortnight.

But despite this cup failure, the Israelis finished their three-week tour with an overall record of seven wins in 16 matches, several of them against top-class UK clubs. One fixture was drawn and another rained out, team manager Gabriel Kandli told The Jerusalem Post yesterday on his return home with most of the While not making excuses, Kandli pointed out that Israel was drawn in by far the toughest of the three qualifying groups. Wales fielded six county players, the vaunted Dutch team could even boast a victory over mighty Australia, and the much underrated U.S. line-up of West Indian and Indian immigrants proved to be the surprise of the whole tourna-ment, finishing second to allpowerful Sri Lanka (which took first place in the group, in spite of forfeiting four points for refusing to play Israel).

New caps Dov Moss and Michael Jacob were among the "finds" of the 15-man touring party. Moss, an opening bat, headed the tour averages with a total of 402 runs from 15 innings and a top score of 56, and his fielding at mid-off was always brilliant. Left-arm spinner Jacob topped the bowling averages, claiming 24 wickets for 292 runs, at an average of 12.16.

Also in great form with the ball were Jacob's fellow-spinner Reuben Reuben with 20 wickets for 275 runs and paceman Barry Kanpol, who collected 23 wickets for 853 runs, and also proved a most valuable tailend

Israel's fielding was generally good, with Zion Moshe in the deep sking the most catches. Skipper Yoram Kessel kept well behind the wicket, though — like his vicecaptain Isaac Solomon --- he was a disappointment with the bat. Second to Moss in the batting average was Leslie Susser, who hit 261 runs in 14 innings, with his 63 against Bir-mingham's Lye club, the highest score by an Israeli on the tour.

Kandli reported that Israel eatablished friendly relations with all the teams in the qualifying meet, including Sri Lanka, Malaysia and Bangladesh.

At Rose

THERE ARE people whose heroism is a function of their way of life, and of the ideological motivation that guides them. And there are those who suddenly find themselves plunged into an heroic situation, almost unwillingly as it were.

My mother, Dora Bloch, certainly belonged in the second category. She was born in Jaffa at the turn of the century. Her father, Yosef Feinberg, was one of the few Russian Jews who, after the pogroms of the 1880s. chose to immigrate to Eretz Yisrael instead of America

When she was still a baby, her father died in Jericho, where he had gone alone to recover from his aches and pains. He was the first to have interested Baron de Rothschild in the Zionist settlement endeavour. When he was expelled from Rishon Lezion after the farmers' revolt against the baron's officials, he unsuccessfully tried his hand at oil manufacturing in Lydda and, later, as a pharmacist in Jaffa. Others certainly benefited from his enterprise. but his widow and six children were obliged to make their way to Egypt, where the eldest son earned a living as a village physician. They were the only Jewish family in the village.

The home Dora grew up in was hardly full of nostalgic yearning for Eretz Yisrael, though it was at her mother's piano in Rishon Lezion that Naftali Hertz Imber is supposed to have written the words of "Hatikva." As it happened, Dora's brothers and sisters subsequently scattered throughout the world. She came to Jerusalem on a visit and met here Aharon Bloch, whom she

Thus it was that a Jewish soldier from Wales and a daughter of a founder of Rishon Lezion started a family in Jerusalem.

MY PARENTS were simple people, part of the silent majority whose very lives here helped to create the

MY LAST ARTICLE dealt with some of the problems associated with tonsils and the medical controversy concerning their removal, particularly in childhood. This one deals with adenoids. The controversies about them are less, and the indications to remove them, adenoidectomy, usually more clear-

The adenoids are situated behind the back of the nose in the uppermost part of the throat cavity. They consist of vertical ridges of immunologically active tissue, separated by deep clefts. These clefts probably play a similar role to the tonsils in the body's defence mechanisms against infection, but this is still disputed. Like the tonslis, too, the adenoids tend to enlarge in early childhood and become smaller again towards puberty.

It is probable that adenoids sometimes become actively inflamed, as do tonsils, but because they cannot be seen by simply opening the mouth (as the tonsils can), it is likely that the true diagnosis of acute adenoiditis is often missed, and the symptoms attributed to a bad cold or some other type of upper respiratory state. They never drained swamps. or built roads, or danced the hora on a haystack. They were just an ordinary family of bank clerks. They brought up three sons, attended services at the Yeshurun synagogue, and quietly lived out their lives. Father served in Mishmar Ha'am and Haga. Mother protected her children during the riots when the first residents of Rehavia sought refuge in the Ratisbon monastery. During the War of Independence, when Jerusalem was under siege, she used the knowledge she had acquired from the Arabs to teach her neighbours and Jerusalem's women the mitrifive value of weeds and nettles, especially the famous

She had a remarkable talent for languages and knew English, French, German, Russian, Italian, Greek, Yiddish, and colloquial rable in both the Egyptian and Palestinian dialects. Her talent was put to use in Entebbe, where she in-terpreted for the French-speaking hostages and the Russian family. When the Old City was liberated in 1967, I strolled with her in the shuk, every corner of which she knew well. She amazed the vendors with her fluent Arabic, which she had not used for 19 years.

She loved every nook and cranny, every tree, village and garden in this country. She always insisted on going to see each new area and enterprise for herself. Her eyes would fill with tears whenever she heard Yaffa Yarkoni singing "Bab-el-Wad." Every military cemetery contained her relatives, sons of her friends and acquaintances, sons of neighbours and friends of her sons. But she was deeply convinced that peace would come one day.

She was grateful that she had lived to see the liberation of Jerusalem. During the Yom Kippur War she endured a long period of anxiety after she learned that her sister's grand-son, Arye Aloni, was missing in the Suez Canal area. It was some months before his death could be ascertained and his body recovered. (Arye was posthumously decorated for his courage.)

That, it would seem, is the fate of my family — to die alone and, only after many difficulties are over-come, finally get a Jewish burial. The body of my mother's cousin, Avahalom Feinberg, was discovered only 50 years after his death. We were sure that just as Avshalom was finally given a Jewish burial, so too would our mother finally be buried in her final resting place in the con-secrated ground she had chosen, next to our father's grave on Har panorama of the hills of Jerusalen which ahe so loved for more than half

IN RECENT years she was happy to witness the returning home to E Yisrael of so many members of her family. Her sister, who had stayed behind in Egypt, came on aliya in the 1950s and with her son and grandson settled in Kibbutz Yad Mordechai. Her brother's son, the well-known French writer, Alain Feinber, came to live in Ellat. Relatives of her husband also came to live here. As part of her voluntary work for WIZO she looked after Soviet immigrants. They were made to feel that her home was always open to members of the family, old and young, assembled in our home. Surely she would have been pleased to see such a gathering.

After her funeral, dozens of Yisrael, a Jewish mother, she was propelled by the hand of fate into the centre of a tragedy with international reverberations. She became a sort of symbol, and served as a testament to the brutality of a murderer under the inspiration of international terrorism of the PLOfascist variety.

There is a terrible paradox in the fact that the fate of one person can shock the world more than the coldblooded murder of hundreds of thousands of Ugandans. But the murder of one old woman, who was quite helpless, in hospital in Kampala, did more than anything else to bring about the isolation of the mad tyrant from the world community. It prevented his attending the British Commonwealth conference and from going to any place where civilized people met and it laid the ground for the overthrow of his

DORA BLOCH cannot be brought back to life, just as we cannot bring back to life the hundreds of thousands of Ugandans who perished. But we can save those Ugandans who survived and we can help their country to get back on its feet again.

It is impossible to forget those who were ready to endanger their lives in order to preserve her few belongings and who remembered the burial place of one old woman.

There was a series of coincidences: she advanced her flight to New York by three days in order to visit her brother in Paris. And the doctor at Mulago Hospital in Kam-pala, knowing that the deadline of the terrorists' ultimatum was approaching, took pity on her and decided to keep her for another night at the hosptial, although she had by then fully recovered. But then coincidence is what makes history.

From the day she remained alone in Kampala we neither rested nor had a moment's peace. On that hitter day the evil vengeance of a bloodthirsty tyrant had the lead on diplomatic activity. But afterwards we exhausted all the possible channels. We tried various and curious ways of persuading Amin to send us her remains. But he refused to admit that she had been killed.

Every scrap of information that had been accumulated was put to use on the day his regime fell. Israeli and British representatives helped us to establish contact with the new Ugandan authorities. They did not spare any efforts to help us find the burial place. It had been concealed by Amin's secret police, but the local villagers knew where to find it. We finally located the body, which was identified and buried in consecrated ground. During the funeral, well away from the mourners and the TV cameras, there stood in his anonymity a man who had devoted many days to make that ceremony possi-

And we, the sons, felt that we had fulfilled the last wish of our dear mother, which surely passed through her mind during those cruel and terrible final moments, there. far away, alone in Uganda.

Annoying adenoids

If the adenoids become unduly enlarged, either as a result of their 'normal" tendency to increase in size or as a result of repeated infection, or both, then this may give rise to quite characteristic symptoms. Purely on account of their size, they may take up so much room in the upper part of the throat that they obstruct the posterior exit of the nose into the throat. In young children this may cause feeding difficulties. as the child must stop eating frequently to catch a breath through his

Feeding times are consequently prolonged and may prove a tiring ex-perience for both mother and baby. Often such children have a wet bubbly nose and noisy breathing. In older children with largish adenoids, mouth breathing also occurs, as does a tendency to snore at night. In addition, the voice may become less reso nant than normal. Doctors used to be fond of describing a typical "adenoids" face for children so troubled. The child has a per-manently open mouth and a rather vacant expression. Nowadays it is accepted that often such an appearance is due to jaw and dental abnormalities and is not necessarily a result of adenoid problems.

OFTEN MORE worrying than the above symptoms are the chronic infections large and usually infected adenoids may induce. As well as a permanently running nose — the result of infection provoked by interference to the normal drainage of nasal secretions through the back of the nose — the nasal sinuses may also become infected. Also, since the adenoids lie close to the openings of the eustachian tubes, which connect the ears with the back of the throat, infection may easily spread from the adenoids up these tubes into the ears, giving rise to recurrent attacks of ear infection, acute otitis media. Eventually this may affect hearing. if allowed to continue. Even large non-inflamed adenoids may encroach on the tubes and be associated with the development of serious otitis media, "glue ear," which I have already discussed fully in a recent article.

In older children, who can cooperate, the adenoids can be visualized by inserting a tiny mirror through the mouth into the back of the throat. The adenoids are seen from below in reflection. X-rays of the face, taken from the side, can also help ascertain the presence of enlarged adenoids. Sometimes in very young children the situation may have to be determined by a direct examination under anesthetic. A finger carefully positioned at the back of the child's mouth can palpate the adenoidal pad

A complete examination of the nasal passages must always also be carried out since there are several other possible causes of prolonged nasal obstruction and infection. which need to be excluded. These include some deformity in the anatomy of the nose and foreign bodies, which have become lodged in the nostrils after being put there by mischievous youngsters.

When there is evidence that the symptoms may have an allergic basis, this too must be carefully investigated since adenoidectomy, like - tonsillectomy in such cases, will not improve matters, and what is called for is specific anti-allergy treat-

THUS THE PRINCIPAL indications for removing adenoids are evidence of associated nasal obstruction with resultant symptoms and complications and/or recurrent ear infections. Also when "glue-ear" has been diagnosed, enlarged adenoids are generally removed in the same operation in which the ears are drained of their sticky fluid and drainage tubes, grommets, inserted through the ear drums.

Unlike tonsillectomy, which is rarely performed before the age of three, adenoidectomy can be undertaken in children younger than this. When adenoidectomy is properly indicated, the relief from the previously troublesome symptoms is usually swift and permanent.

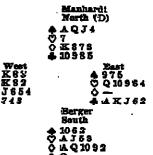

I myself had my adenoids out not long after my second birthday. Although I don't remember very much about it, the operation brought my parents great relief too — from my very noisy nightly snoring that had prevailed until then.

A club was the opening lead. North played low and East won with the king. A heart was returned and won by declarer with the ace.

Berger counted — five diamond tricks, hopefully four spades if the finesse against the king were successful, the heart already won. and the ruff of a heart in dummy would give him his contract. But this was not enough. He found a combined play of ruffing two clubs and establishing a club that gave him six trump tricks. This was 12 tricks in all without ruffing a heart. Here is how the play proceeded.

At the third trick, declarer finessed the spade jack, and then played a high club to the jack and diamond 9. This trumping with the 9, holding the deuce for what might develop, was a key play. He then won, in order, the diamond queen, a spade finesse, another club ruff with the diamond ace - thereby establishing a high club in dummy, the diamond 10, and a diamond finesse, playing the deuce so carefully saved towards the diamond king in dummy. He cashed his last diamond in the dummy and then won two top spades and the established club, making 12 tricks in all. This was a Top-Bottom master-

TEL AVIVIANS cannot help feeling their city is turning into something resembling the film set of a detective movie, in which police cars constantly chase escaping criminals. Certain police officers admit privately that they themselves are worried by police drivers, who are mostly young and very much aware of the fact that no officer will slap them with a traffic report for speeding or driving in a way which endangers passersby.

Police regulations permit policemen to drive faster than permissible by law only when chasing a dangerous criminal. But this law has long been abused. A detailed account on the crime situation which will soon be published by the Tel Aviv police will show a steep rise in crime in Israel's largest city. The publication which will be an eye-opener to many will prove that not only crime increased during the first half of the year but also the severity of the offences.

Obviously not all police cars driving inside the city at 100 kph are doing it for kicks. Many of them are hurrying to the scene of a crime. But after following wild police cars which pass red lights, especially during the evening hours, I have found that many policemen who drive at dangerous speeds do so only because some policeman feels like "letting

Bank Leumi to float $75m. Eurodollar issue

By Joseph Morgenstern Post Finance Reporter

TEL AVIV. - In the largest-ever capital financing flotation to be carried out by an Israeli company overseas, Bank Leumi will shortly tap the Eurodollar market with a $75m. issue. It will be carried out by Leumi International, daughter company of Bank Leumi.

Bearer $1,000 certificates will be issued carrying a floating interest rate. The loan will come up for redemption in 1986. A novel feature of the issue is that the note holder will be entitled, at his option, to extend the date of redemption by an additional three years, namely until

The issue is fully guaranteed by Bank Leumi. The interest rate will be set ¼ per cent over the London Inter-Bank rate for periods of six months. Israeli residents will be able to purchase these notes on the first day they will be registered for trading on the London Stock Exchange.

Israeli investors will find that these notes will yield 1.5-2.0 per cent more before tax than they could earn from Patam, Israel foreign currency deposits, for a comparable period of Interest due on the notes will be paid semi-annually and a minimum 5 per cent yield is guaranteed by the issuer, even if the international interest rates should fall below that

Upon completion of the current financing issue Bank Leumi will have raised a sum total of $195m. on the Eurodollar market. As in the past, the issue will be distributed through the Bank Leumi group of banks and companies, without financial help from other banks or un-

It should be pointed out that the bank is thus saving the large underwriting costs it would incur if the issue was underwritten by outside financial groups.

The moneys raised will be used to strengthen Bank Leumi's financial base in international activities.

In the past year Bank Leumi has expanded noticeably and has acquired a 49 per cent interest in the former Bank Kupat Aliya. It has opened an additional 23 new branches throughout the country. The number of offices and branches has reached 395, of which 42 are located in 17 countries throughout the world.

Bank Leumi reports that in recent years overseas operations have made a larger contribution to the bank's overall profitability. Bank Leumi has recently paid shareholders an 8½ per cent gross cash dividend and 15 per cent in bonus shares.

Since the end of the first week of May the bank's shares have appreciated by nearly 20 per cent.

BUSINESS BRIEFS

By ALAN ELSNER Jerusalem Post Reporter

TOTAL EXPORTS of the Klobutz Industries grew by 24 per cent last year, amounting to $126m. This compares to $101m. in 1977. This growth paralleled the general growth in exports in the economy and the propor-tion of exports of the Kibbutz Industries stayed at 6.5 per cent of total exports. Most exports went to the European Economic Community (45 per cent), with North and Central America taking 18 per cent, the Middle and Far East 15 per cent, and other European states 12 per cent.

ALMOST 6,000 PEOPLE are now employed in the Israeli economy in research and development, 2,800 of them academics and a further 3,000 technicians. This work force was responsible last year for the develop-ment of thousands of new products and processes, according to the chairman of the executive committee for research and develop-

Gov't workers switching to industry should receive bonus, Katz claims

By SHLOMO MAOZ Post Economic Reporter

Government workers who leave their jobs for production and building jobs in the south should receive a larger retirement compensation, Israel Katz, minister of labour and social affairs, said yesterday. He was speaking at a celebration in the Knesset marking the 20th anniversary of the formation of the Employment Service.

Katz reported that there are 1,000 foreign workers employed in Israel today, saying his ministry hopes to prevent any increase of that number except for those who will be involved in constructing the new Negev air-fields. He said Israel may face social problems if it chooses the easy way out by bringing in foreign workers.

The minister said that 200,000 workers moved into the industry field in 1978. 20 per cent new immigrants or newly released soldiers and 25 per cent from the administered territories. According to Katz, the industry, building and transport sectors need another 35,000 workers during the 1979/80 year.

Katz also reported that the amount of income tax collected from workers from the territories was more than that collected from Israel Arabs.

Matarol irrigation control unit in the field.

Motorola tackles problems of electronic irrigation

By YITZHAK OKED

TEL AVIV.— Motorola yesterday showed reporters its small computerized irrigation and liquid fertilizer controller, called Matarol 2000. This unit has been specially built by Motorola Israel for the small moshav farmer to enable him to preprogramme his irrigation plans. He no longer has to go to his field to open and shut irrigation valves, because this is done automatically. The new system allows him to irrigate his fields with exactly measured quantitles of water. This saves water and allows the plants to give maximum yields, since too much or too little water affects yields.

The new system sells for about IL50,000, rising in price depending on how many electronic valves the manager Aharon Sorek said that this season the Matarol is being tested. If everything proved to be all right it would go into mass production next year. About IL20m. will be invested in further development of the Matarol.

According to farmer Hanoch Sinai of Moshav Shibolim, the introduction of the Matarol system in his peanut field will lead to an increased yield of about 100 kilograms per dunam. Hanoch Sinai is one of the selected farmers to test this new irrigation method in their fields. He claims that he now has more time, that his field is without bald patches (places iwhere the plants die off because of irregular irrigation).

Sinal says that in addition to higher yields he estimates that he will be saving money by using about 25 per cent less water and fertilizers.

Publish laws in clear language, MK says after refrigerator tragedy

By YORAM BAR Jerusalem Post Reporter

TEL AVIV. - Following Monday's disaster in Rishon Lezion, in which two children aged four and a half and three died after hiding in a nefrigerator, MK Mordechai Virshubski will propose that Knesset laws be published in simple language, easily understood by Virshubski told The Post that the public is not aware of the law passed a few years ago, which forbids leaving old refrigerators around. "These tragedies could easily be avoided if tion." Virshubski said.

The Knesset Member added that about a year ago he made his suggestion to the Knesset Speaker "but until now nothing has been done, as is the case with many other suggestions made in this house."

The two children, Asaf and Barak, who were cousins, were found lifeless inside an old refrigerator on the balcony of the flat of their aunt, diemi Mosse.

A Tel Aviv police officer told The Post yesterday that such disasters occur every year. "The police cannot accuse parents of negligence leading to manslaughter. The tragedy is so great that we simply cannot indict the bereave families," the officer said.

South Africa cuts speed limits to save petrol

JOHANNESBURG (UPI). - Shocked South African motorists awoke yesterday to discover speeders could be slapped with much larger fines than those levied against some peo ple convicted of attempted manslaughter.

In a tough crackdown, Pretoria Chief Magistrate M. J. Prins announced that the maximum fine for speeding was being raised to 2,000 rand ($2,400).

This compares with a 200 rand ($240) fine levied against a man recently convicted of attempted manslaughter, who also had his gun licence suspended for three months.

The stiffer fines followed the unvelling of harsh new austerity measures to reduce petroleum consumption in the face of the current oil crisis. These included the price of petrol being upped to 54.3 South African cents a litre ($2.60 per U.S. gallon; the closure of all petrol stations from Friday dusk to Monday morning, and a reduction of the speed limit to 70 km per hour on urban highways.

Prins said that anyone caught driving 90 kph would automatically be fined 100 rand ($120). After that he said the fine would rise at the rate of 10 rand per extra kilometre to the top rate of 2,000 rand ($2,400).

Kupat Holim chairman sounds alarm about crisis in health services

By ALAN ELSNER Jerusalem Post Reporter

TEL AVIV. - "The public health system in this country is on the brink of total collapse within the next few weeks." Prof. Haim Doron, chairman of Kupat Holim, said here recently. "The government should admit its responsibility for the existence of health services and act immediately to solve the financial crisis that public health institutions are facing. If it does not do so, I do not exaggerate when I say that the health system will soon find itself in a position where it is unable to continue functioning."

Doron said that Kupat Holim had been unable to formulate a budget for the 1979 financial year with its present deficit and in view of the refusal of the Health Ministry to forward emergency funds to the organization. "We worked out an emergency budget for the months of april, May and June, will this runs out in two weeks and what happens after that I just do not know." In Doron's opinion, the only way out of the crisis was to adopt a series of emergency measures, which would serve as criteria of action for the present period of inflation. He said that he had met with Health Minister Eliezer Shostak, who agreed with the principle of the emergency measures he was suggesting. Doron's emergency plan calls for the setting up of an "emergency staff" which would institute a number of special measures. These are to include the avoidance of unnecessary hospitalization, streamlining of the work force with the intention of instituting greater efficiency, refraining from buying new, sophisticated equipment from abroad, and a rigid check on all expenses, with approval to be given only to those considered absolutely.

Stocks and index-linked bonds continue to rise

TEL AVIV. — Both the share and index-linked bond market continued yesterday to follow the recently established upward trend. Financial stocks were still in the spotlight, led by Bank Hapoalim, which rose three points on large trading turnovers.

The rise in index-linked bonds was more selective, with "double-option" linked bonds and 6.5 per cent bonds leading the way with gains of up to 2.5 per cent. The recent sharp rise in the price of the U.S. dollar vis-a-vis the Israeli pound was halted, as the pound lost only three agorot against the American currency.

On Thursday, Bank Hapoalim securities will trade ex-rights. Observers expect the price of the ordinary shares to be about 452. Theoretically, the price of the rights will be inthe order of 30, but should the price of Hapoalim shares continue to appreciate strongly between now and the trading day for July rights, then their price could be considerably higher. If this occurs, the new shares could reach the market at a handsome premium over their basic cost. Turkey devalues lira 77%

ISTANBUL (UPI). — The Turkish government yesterday announced a 77 per cent devaluation of its currency, the Turkish lira. The devaluation made the new rate of exchange 47.10 lira to the U.S.

ficial rate of 27 lira. Government officials said the devaluation was necessary as part of the conditions imposed by the International Monetary Fund (IMF) for extending financial aid to Turkey to help it overcome its chronic omic crisis. The agreement with the IMF is expected to be signed tomassive in Turkish history, officials As part of the reform arrangements, the government also decreed a special exchange rate of 35 lira to the dollar, applicable only to agricultural products.

It also ended state subsidies accorded to state-run economic enterprises as a cushion agains: rampant

Economic experts said these measures meant there would be a steep rise in prices of fuel oil, iron and steel products, tobacco, alcoholic drinks and railroad day.

Defence surpluses must be vetted – c'tee

By ASHER WALLFISH

Jerusalem Post Knesset Reporter The annual surpluses of billions of pounds in the Defence Ministry budget should not be left to the ministry to dispose of without external supervision, most members of the Knesset State Control Committee

After a discussion of the State Comptroller's review of the implementation of the defence budget, in which it emerged that IL5b. were left unspent last year, the committee decided to call in top Defence and Finance Ministry officials next week to talk about the huge annual sur-agreed yesterday.

The consensus was that the Treasury has to be involved in any Defence Ministry decision to transfer unspent money from one year to another or from one budgetary item to another. The present vague situation with regard to unspent money

Also at yesterday's session, the Comptroller, Yitzhak Nebenzahl, agreed to the request of Avraham Katz-Oz (Alignment-Labour) to probe the mystery of the soldiers' ballots for the 1977 Knesset elections found in their hundreds earlier this month, scattered over a Tel Aviv building site.

The housewife's back

WAR IS CONFUSION. If there is any one word that can characterize the government's "war" on inflation it is just that: confusion.

This is true both of the mini and the maxi wars. The confusion attending the latest advertising campaign that has been encouraging the buying public to "fight inflation," with embarrassingly simplistic advice, is, in microcosm, a commentary on the chaos that informs the government's larger efforts in this

Yet no matter how confused — and it is not quite clear who hired the advertising firm or for how much - the campaign is at least an indication that the economic leaders of the government have begun to take the need to do something about inflation, or at least to be seen to be doing something about it, seriously. This

The possible electoral impact of our rampant inflation, which could get to three digits, provided the main undercurrent of concern at last week's Herut convention and Mr. Begin was quick to react at Sunday's cabinet meeting. This also constitutes admirable progress although the same cannot necessarily be said for the Prime Minister's impassioned determination "not to fight the war against inflation on the back of the housewife."

The decision to freeze food prices — at least until Mr. Ehrlich's return from abroad — will of course mean that the governmental budgets for food subsidies will rise. Hitherto, part of the official wisdom the Treasury has been fobbing off on the public is that it was essential to cut subsidies to the bone. Even if that would cause consumer prices to jump, it would be a case of short term sacrifice for the purpose of long term gain. It is now not at all clear whether that official wisdom is still considered valid by the government; or whether the newer wisdom will be valid after next week.

What is clear is that the problem of inflation is no longer purely economic. It has orbited into the uncharted field of mass psychology. All sane Israelis - Mr. Zurabin's advice notwithstanding - have been basing their personal economic behaviour on the assumption that inflation will continue to grow. This assumption is now the main motive force of what has turned into a self-fulfilling prophecy.

The fact of the matter is also that a sizeable number of Israelis have developed a profound vested interest in the continuation and growth of inflation. That is one of the factors that makes any war against it so difficult, politically.

It is doubtful whether any government of elected politicians can be expected to mount a successful war against such inflation — with "successful" meaning "painful" for a significant part of the consumer-electors — with an election looming only

It may be that the situation will become so desperate when the alternative to such a war is considered that some courageous politicians will attempt it. What should be clear, however, when that time comes, is that while public relations, advertising and jawboning should be weapons in such a war, the primary problem is that of establishing the credibility of the generals in

Until that credibility is established, on the basis of evidence of governmental consistency and determination, and a feeling that it knows what it is doing, it is a foregone conclusion that the mass of Israelis will continue to stoke the fires of inflation, to their own and the country's detriment.

SHIELD AND SWORD Dry Bones

HANA GREENBAUM, chairwoman of the Consumer Shield organization, takes issue with a recent article in The Jerusalem Post which indicated that food hygiene is being monitored properly in Israel.

THE PUBLIC needs someone to champion the improvement of hygienic standards of food production and marketing. The dean of the Technion's food and bio-technology faculty, Prof. Haim Mannheim, was presented as just such a champion in an article entitled "Constantly on the Alert" in The Jerusalem Post on April 8. But we must be wary when "improvements" are carried out by those who labour under a conflict of interest.

Mannheim admits that his faculty works for and is paid by industry. Great perception is not required to realize that when industry commissions research for the improvement of its product, the overriding factor is not necessarily quality or safety, but often how to compromise quality and safety to promote sales and maximize profits. Promoting a product is legitimate, but contending that industrial research is done solely for the benefit of the consumer is misleading and against the public

While dealing in innuendoes and casting thinly veiled aspersions con-cerning Consumer Shield's work in food hygiene, Mannheim refrains from making any outright accusa-tion. What is he afraid of? We for-mally challenge him to show that anything ever published by Consumer Shield was incorrect, or not in the public interest.

We are proud that in the six years that Consumer Shield has been in existence, we have never had to amend, alter, or correct a single word that we have published.

The reasons for this include the great care we take with our investigations and the large number of expert advisers available to us, both in Israel and abroad. These include physicians in various specialties (including public health, epidemiology and pathology). physiologists, toxicologists, dieticians, statisticians, geneticists, bio-chemists and microbiologists.

ON THE OTHER hand, in Consumer Shield's experience, Mannheim has acted, particularly in his work at the Israel Standards Institute, in a singularly unfavourable manner in matters pertaining to consumer protection. Mannheim was elected chairman of a committee—composed almost exclusively of dairy industry representatives — that was charged with revising the existing (weak) standard for pasteurized milk. Not a single representative of an independent consumer organization was on the committee. A complete (and essentially final) draft was hurriedly prepared.

Space limits me from presenting a complete analysis of the milk "standard" suggested by Mannheim's committee, but I must mention several important items.

Firstly, there was not a word in the standard restricting pesticide residues. Yet the repeated findings by Consumer Shield of large quantities of highly carcinogenic pesticides in Israeli milk and milk products (originally denied by the Health Ministry) have since been confirmed both by an expert committee set up by that ministry and by a committee of the Knesset.

Secondly is the matter of bacterial contamination. We believe that fecal bacteria have no place in milk; many are potential pathogens. The generally accepted international standard since the beginning of this century has been 10 coliform organisms per millilitre of milk. But textbooks on the subject — even those published for persons, like Mannheim, working in the field of food technology — agree that 10 is "a very lenient standard." Indeed, we in Consumer Shield agree with the enlightened trend today that a proper standard should be zero

Israeli dairies, however, have been unable (or unwilling) to produce milk that meets even the lenient standard of 10. Repeated testing both by Consumer Shield and by the Health Ministry has shown that a large proportion of the milk produced — over 90 per cent in some series -- cannot meet this minimal standard even when tested at the dairies, before transportation and marketing.

But instead of suggesting that the already lenient standard be improved, Mannheim's committee decided to debase that standard even further by raising the allowed level of coliform bacteria from 10 to 100. Finally, Mannheim's committee also set down testing protocols in such a way that even if some 40 percent of milk produced was unable to meet the new, weakened standard, the situation, despite testing by the Health Ministry, could still go entirely undetected.

AT THIS POINT Consumer Shield fought for and won representation on the committee. Our first representative was a soft-spoken retired woman with a lifetime of work in the food sciences. After being heckled, hounded and forced into silence by the committee, she asked Dr. Jerry Westin, our chief medical consujtant, for help.

Westin then attended the committee meetings and, despite the dis-torted makeup of the committee, was instrumental in initiating changes in all the problematic areas noted above, as well as in others. in an effort to safeguard the health of the milk consumer.

This apparently displeased Mamheim, who crudely tried last January to close the committee meetings to Westin, an attempt that, we are happy to add, we were able to

To help correct other wrong impressions that may have been gained by Jerusalem Post readers, I take issue with the fact that Mannheim blames the small plants producing 20 per cent of the food products for not having adequate hygienic standards, but assures us that the other 80 per cent of processed food are produced under satisfactory hygienic standards. They are satisfactory for him perhaps, but a far cry from satisfactory from the consumer's viewpoint.

It is no secret that the milk and milk products tested by Consumer Shield are not those of small plants, but are the products of the three major producers in the country. The largest of these producers, Touva, fared no better in these tests than the others, and, in fact, in many instances fared worse.

NO DOUBT Mannheim can make significant contributions in the field of food technology by virtue of his expertise in this area, but we cannot unreservedly accept his pronouncements in the field of preventive medicine anymore than we could suggest that one should go to Mannheim to have a baby delivered or to have his appendix

The fields in which he has mhesitatingly made pronouncements require, according to our medical experts, diverse knowledge on subjects that I even have difficulty pronouncing, such as the influence of microsomal cytochrome dysfunctionon sinc protoporphyrin levels; the difference between attributed and relative epidemiological risk: enzyme induction and chemical activation; and the implications of an Parissister chromatid exchanges, just to mention a few. Would Mannheim have us believe that he is an experi in all these areas as well as in hurdreds of other related ones?

Beyond the limitations of his expertise, even Mannheim should realize that his conflict of interest does not license him to speak on

THE CASE OF THE TEACHERS

To the Editor of The Jerusalem Post Sir, - Has your editorial writer really no way of checking his facts before writing his piece -"Teachers' responsibility" (June

Let us begin at the end: Secondary school teachers have not claimed "the right to receive more than their colleagues in the elementary schools." Israeli teachers are paid according to the individual's academic achievement and seniority. Place of work does not come into Should you be referring to differences in the number of classroom-hours taught for a full salary, the gradual decrease of teaching periods applies to all teachers from kindergarten through to teachers' colleges. Such differentiation is standard practice the world over and accepted here by members of both teachers' organizations. In Israel, teachers at certain levels . of primary and secondary schools teach the same number of hours for equal pay. What we are asking for is a bit more than the crumbs we are getting - the "bread and butter" is far above us at the moment.

Now to the main point of your editorial: it was at the ministry's insistence — and most probably due to their wish to punish the teachers for striking - that July 18 was chosen as the closing date for the present school year in secondary schools. These officials were warned that such an extension of the school year into the summer, after two terms without any proper break for pupils and staff, was going to be not only counter-productive educationally, but also impractical. Since in many schools not all the teachers would be available, but only those who had chosen to strike, some schools would be only partly staffed for the most difficult part of any school-year: the last three weeks, when motivation for learning rapidly and normally drops to zero. But officials always know best and could not be per-suaded. I know — I was there and tried. That was in December.

By the beginning of April, these same officials began to realize the absurdity of the "punishment" and on April 11 (yes, I was there), the Director General of the Ministry of Education suggested that a way should be found to close all schools as of June 30. This is the simple fact. and not as you state in your editorial.

At no time since its inception did the Association of Secondary School Teachers try to renege on any of its agreements with the government We are one of the few professional organizations who have kept and carried out every single obligation we have signed, and we shall continue to do so. Considering the society we live in, this basic honesty has, unfortunately, proved detrimental to the material well-being of teachers:

It is therefore nothing but a bistant ase of deliberate and inexcusable falsehood and slander to accuse us of setting an example ."that agreements are made to be broken." PINCHAS VARDIN

JUDGMENT

To the Editor of The Jerusalem Post Sir. — In my opinion the Minister of Justice has erred — and gravely so. Those who commit terrorist acts against Israeli citizens and those who are, or intend to be, accessories before or after such acts, are guilty of a crime against the Jewish people and are not to be pardoned lightly. Fleener and Janusen were given fair trials and relatively lenient sentences; there is no call to reduce these — the unwarranted and inappropriate alleged interference of foreign governments and dignitaries notwithstanding. Citizens of Israel have a right to feel that they live in a country in which law and justice prevail and in which their interests and safety are paramount — not in one in which their lives and safety are forfeit and their court rulings overthrown at the whim or beheat of foreign officials. Furthermore, it cannot rationally be held that to release a terrorist found guilty of the intent to commit espionage against the state constitutes a "gesture of goodwill" towards the president of a friendly nation; certainly not if he, in fact, harbours good-will towards us. Let us hope that President Navon, in his wisdom, will not go along with this; enlightened self-interest, as well as self-respect, require that the error made with regard to Capucci not be repeated. NETTA KOUN DOR-SHAV
